Who is eligible as an athlete with an intellectual impairment?

Athletes must have a diagnosis of intellectual impairment and meet the minimal disability criteria:

1. Intellectual impairment with a score of 75 or lower on an internationally recognised and professionally administered IQ test (eg a WISC-R or WAIS-III),
2. Demonstrated limitations in social/interpersonal, communication, or self care skills.
3. Evidence of intellectual impairment prior to 18 years age.

When do I need a classification?

If you want to compete in sport as an athlete with an impairment, you must undergo a sports specific classification assessment and hold a particular level of classification. As a general guide you should undergo a classification assessment prior to regional, state or national level championships.

Athletes who are selected to represent Australia at international level competition will be required to attend international classification.

Who conducts a classification for Paralympic Sports?

Classification is conducted by AUSRAPID as a service to the APC.

How do I get classified?

Each sport has specific processes for athletes to arrange a classification.

National Classification: For athletes competing at regional, state and national level championships within Australia, an AUSRAPID Eligibility process applies. The application form can be found on the AUSRAPID website or through the AUSRAPID member organisation in your state.

Alternatively you can request a classification using the Get classified form on the Australian Paralympic Committee website.

Athletes wishing to claim Australian records for Athletics and Swimming must also have been through the Primary Eligibility Check (INAS process) as detailed in Step 1 below.

International level: For eligibility to gain selection to a National team to compete internationally, the classification of athletes with an intellectual impairment is a two stage process:

Step 1. Primary Eligibility Check (INAS): an international process that determines that an athlete meets the eligibility criteria. This process is co-ordinated through the National Federation for the sport.

Step 2. Sports-Specific Classification: Classification involves general cognitive and sport specific tests to determine whether a person's intellectual impairment has a significant impact on the execution of their sport skills. Only classifiers appointed by the relevant International Federation are able to conduct this process.
